

Bravo® pH Monitoring Available Here

What is Bravo pH Monitoring?

Given Imaging's Bravo pH Monitoring System is the world's first catheter-free pH monitoring test for gastro oesophageal reflux disease (GORD).

The Bravo pH Monitoring System utilizes a small pH capsule (about the size of a gel cap) that is temporarily attached to the wall of the esophagus. The capsule transmits pH data wirelessly for forty-eight hours to a pager-sized receiver worn on your waistband or belt. These data will help your doctor make a diagnosis and treat your symptoms.

The Bravo pH Monitoring Procedure

The day of the test, your physician will insert the Bravo pH capsule into your esophagus. After the capsule is in position, the capsule is locked in place with little to no discomfort. As soon as the capsule is attached, it begins measuring the pH levels in your esophagus for forty-eight hours.

Your doctor will instruct you to press one of the three symptom buttons on the receiver, worn on your waistband or belt, during the study when you experience heartburn, regurgitation, or chest pain. You will also be asked to record periods of eating and sleeping in a diary throughout the test. When the study is complete, you will simply return the receiver and diary to your doctor. The disposable capsule will spontaneously detach and pass through your digestive system a few days after the test period.
